

The Davistown Museum

Art Exhibitions

Welcome to The Davistown Museum Art Exhibitions. The following inventory of artworks owned by or on loan to The Davistown Museum are all currently on display, with the exception of the pieces that are noted as withdrawn from a previous exhibition. Art for sale in the Maine Artists Guild is also listed.

The Museum would like to express its thanks to the many contemporary Maine artists who have loaned artworks for this exhibition. The pieces loaned by the working artists of Maine join our growing collection of antiquarian and contemporary art. The typeface of the artist's name expresses the status and age of the work.

normal typeface: antiquarian artworks in the permanent collection or on loan to the Museum bold: contemporary artworks in the permanent collection or on long term loan bold underlined: contemporary works on loan from the artist for the Annual Art Exhibition

Italics: Art for sale in the Maine Artists Guild (MAG) gallery

The ownership status of the art in the Museum exhibits is explained by the following classification system:

DTM	Owned by The Davistown Museum (donation or purchase)
LPCB	Bequests to The Davistown Museum
LA	Loans from the Artist
LPC	Loans from a Private Collection that are not a bequest
GA	Gift from the artist
LSS	Items Loaned for Special Shows
WD	Art that has been withdrawn from the exhibit by the lender
MAG	Maine Artists Guild item
SOLD	Artwork has been sold
DA	Deaccessioned

For the convenience of visitors to the Museum, the location of individual works of art is denoted by the following codes (also please refer to the Visitor's Guide):

MH	Main Exhibition Hall except display cases
MHC	Main Exhibition Hall, in the Cases (A-L)
T	Print Dept and Childrens Room, Display cases (R)
DTHP	Davistown History Project room (U)
P	Fourth floor Photography exhibit and stairwell (V)
Q	Bathroom

c. 1820, oil on board, unsigned, 12 1/2" wide, 9 1/4" high, gold frame 1 1/2" wide. This is a view of Samuel Slater's first mill, located under the bridge to the right. The mill was destroyed a few years after this was painted. The larger brick mills located above the falls help date this historic painting to 1815 - 1820. This painting was found in a South Middleboro, MA, attic on a tool call in 2001. http://www.davistownmuseum.org/pics/93024a1.jpg

Avery, Milton (1885 - 1965)

AHC0001 Landscape: Cole Pond, Rawsonville, Vermont PUR LPC MH

1945, o/c, signed "Milton Avery 45" in lower left corner, 22" x 33 1/2".

This quick study was painted during the early summer of 1945 of a scene in Rawsonville, VT, prior to Avery's annual summer sojourn at Gloucester, MA. Milton had spent many previous summers in the late 1930s at Rawsonville and loved to paint the hills and landscapes of Vermont, as well as of Gaspé and other locations. This particular landscape was painted on the north side of Cole Pond, looking to its southeast shore. Avery depicts a number of the houses on this shoreline by his typical use of short slashes to express structure. This canvas is particularly interesting in that Avery, ala Helen Frankenthaler, utilized bare, unprimed canvas as ground in this landscape study that links his earlier traditionalism with his later color field masterpieces. Signature Avery elements in this landscape, executed in just a few hours, include his habitual use of orthogonals, the unfinished nature of the study, the stick-like structures of the houses on the southeast side of Cole Pond, and, most importantly, the soft radiant ambiance of the clouds and the foliage in this painting. This is a painting executed not for the salon, the art commodity market or for a collector, but just for the love of painting. It represents the day-to-day production of a working painter who wasn't thinking about public opinion. It was also executed at an important juncture in Avery's career, when he was moving away from paintings with traditional perspective and content and experimenting with using color to express mass and space. While the traditional perspective of this study is anomalous in view of his later color field masterpieces, Avery, who never confined himself to one particular style, clearly signals his intense interest in color to express form and space in this landscape, which so clearly predicts his later mastery of color field painting.

Avery, Milton (1885 - 1965)

AHC0001A2 Photograph of Milton Avery's Cole Pond, Rawsonville, VT LPC MH

1980, photograph (transparency), unsigned, 7" high, 12" wide.

This photograph (transparency) is of the Milton Avery landscape painting on exhibit, ID # AHC0001. This landscape, one of Avery's quick studies, is signed in his characteristic linear script and dated 1945. Avery spent many summers during the 1930s in the Rawsonville, Vermont area; he returned here in the early summer of 1945 to paint this landscape prior to his now annual summer sojourn in Gloucester, MA. This painting was executed on the north shore of Cole Pond, looking out to the houses and cottages that dot the southeast shore of the pond. Cole Pond lies within the Green Mountain National Forest to the east of Rawsonville and was an area familiar to Avery from many years of summer visits.

Of particular note is Avery's use of orthogonals to denote the lay of the land and especially of a vestigial road running alongside the hill and connecting with another road lying just out of view, which terminates several miles away along the shore of the West River. In the upper right hand corner of the painting, a distant hill within the town of Jamaica can be seen. All of the elements in this painting are consistent with the US Geological Survey map of 1986 (Londonderry, VT, revised 1997). In depicting the shoreline of Cole Pond, Avery took almost no artistic license to change the landscape, yet it was obviously not his objective to create a realistic rendition of the Cole Pond area.

The fundamental and outstanding characteristic of this painting is Avery's unique ability to use soft colors to express form and space. Both the clouds and the foliage of this Vermont landscape are signature Avery. His unique ability to create the color field masterpieces of his later career are foreshadowed in this painting from the critical mid-years of his career.

Multiple copies of this rare Victorian delight were salvaged out of a Boston attic, ca. 1980. Casa and Victoria Foster were the children of Thomas and Elizabeth Foster of Hampton, Nova Scotia. Originally from Massachusetts, the family migrated to Nova Scotia just before the Revolutionary War, when the English gave free land to populate Nova Scotia. Mr. and Mrs. Foster had 11 children, 3 were midgets. Casa and Victoria toured the world as the "Fairy Sisters" in 1872 and 1873. Victoria was said to be 11 years old and Casa was said to be 3 years old. They died in 1875 in Nova Scotia, within one month of each other.

Special Art Exhibition I - Virginia Goolkasian

A number of works on paper and canvas by Virginia Goolkasian were obtained by the Liberty Tool Co. several years ago from her home in the Mattapan section of Boston following her death in 1997. These works were cleaned, matted and framed and are now on display in the Museum main hall as well as in the hallway and stairwell. Several additional specimens are on display at the Hulls Cove office of the Museum. The Davistown Museum will continue the exhibition of the Goolkasian show in the main hall during 2002, at which time they will be gradually moved to other sections of the Museum to make room for additional works of contemporary Maine painters. Virginia was an interesting Boston school painter who did her best work during and after the great depression; Virginia's style echoes that of Mary Cassat who surely must have influenced her style; her classicism harks back to the hey-day of Boston school artists.

101801A1 Spears (or Night Fishing)

GA MAG-6

1975, BAS relief in plaster and wood, 14" wide, 16" high.

This is the original carving, in plaster and framed, of what would become cast prints in editions of 10 each. Each image was rendered in moist plaster and allowed to harden. It was then prepared for the production of a negative mold, from which ten positives were made and finished with oil paint washes. Each edition sold out and no record of their dispersal exists. Peplowski (b. 1940) worked in Milbridge, Maine from 1969 to 1985 and currently has moved to Phuket, Thailand.

2002, cast paper, 12 1/4" x 6", wrench is 8 3/4" long.

"This wrench, made completely from Immanuel Kant's Critique of Judgment, was used in an attempt to fix my truck. This text is the heady, philosophical root of much twentieth century art. With an unwieldy precision Kant defines abstract concepts like beauty, the sublime, and good. The wrench draws this text out of the abstract and into the world of things. Here, it seems, text fails in its in-ability to function."

nd, Color photograph, 8" x 10" framed.

A color photograph of the doors of David McLaughlin's "Abandoned Workshop" in the Davistown Museum Hulls Cove Sculpture Garden. The doors were salvaged from an 18th century-built Warren warehouse on the St. Georges River and are significant as being a surviving example of "Indian doors" where the metal exterior was intended to deter Indian attacks. Though built after the end of the Indian Wars and the Treaty of Quebec (1763), the existence of these late 18th century doors expressed the continuing fear of Indian attacks by the early settlers of Warren. The doors are also significant in representing one of the first uses of the galvanizing of metal technology, an unintended image that uncovers history.

c. 1946?, Iron and rubber, unsigned.

Manufacturer and date of manufacture unknown. What are the three things that indicate this item may not be an original model of the period, circa 1885? 1. It is fabricated with the use of electric arc welds which date it after 1920. 2. It has a uniform coat of paint -- an older model would not have such a uniform patina. 3. The construction materials used would not hold up for any extended period of use. Note the signs of deterioration on the rims of the wheels. This bicycle has a Maine provenance and appears to have been made between 1925 and 1950. *Currently awaiting reinstallation.{2006}
