The Ancient Dominions of Maine: An Archaeology of Tools
Native American Artifacts

The following listing of Native American artifacts has been divided into Archaic, Ceramic, Historic and 20th Century eras. We are not certain of the exact dating of many of the artifacts and the differentiation between Archaic and Ceramic may represent our best guess. Museum visitors are encouraged to provide feedback on the identification, age or use of any artifact as the museum does not have a resident expert in this field.

Clay with a fossilized shell interior, A.) 15 cm x 2 cm thick, B.) 14.2 cm x 2 cm, C.) 10.2 cm x 2 cm.
These were found in the bottom of a carpenter's tool chest.

Other

TAB1008 Honing stone DTM
Gray sandstone, 10" long, age unknown.
Curved with distinctive marks from years of use. Probably used for honing bone awls and other bone tools. Coastal New England provenance.

Red Paint

110103NA52 Red ochre rock (?) DTM MHC-C
Possibly red ochre, 4 cm.
This item is part of the Cohasset Hoard. It has a waist in the middle all the way around.

011304NA10 Red Paint cup and scrapers (4) DTM
Wapanucket 8 Hoard
Quartz and other stone, 3 1/4" long paint cup, 1 3/8" to 1 1/4" long points, case marked "BS"2 - 1971 M39-81", cup marked "B-5012-2" scrapers marked "B-5013-2; B-5014-2; B-5015-2".
This paint cup would be used with the scrapers and the Red Paint pestles (ID# 011304NA1) to create red paint powder.
